1. The origins of the WORLD GAMES

SportAccord (formerly the General Association of International Sports Federations) exists since 1967. In order to become a member of SportAccord, an international federation must have within its membership a stipulated number of affiliated national organizations spread over the various continents in addition to a well-structured and comprehensive international match calendar. SportAccord has hundred and nine (109) members in 2013. All members have been able to satisfy the criteria and have thereby earned their official affiliation.

On 21st May 1980, twelve members of SportAccord founded the International World Games Association (IWGA) in Seoul, in the Republic of Korea. Membership of the IWGA is open to those members of SportAccord promoting a sport or sports discipline not included in the programme of the Olympic Games. One of the main aims of the IWGA is to organize an international top class multi-sport event under the name of the World Games, once every four years. The IWGA has also set itself the task of widening public and media interest in the World Games and in seeking out sources of financial support in order to enable the participating sports federations to widen their horizons still further. In October 2000 the Presidents of the IOC and of the IWGA signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) which governs the relations between the two organizations. The relations between IOC and IWGA are extended over the years and the IWGA i.e. World Games receive more and more support from the IOC.

The IWGA succeeded as early as 1981 in organizing World Games I in Santa Clara, USA. The number of participants was not very great, public and media interest limited, and financial results disappointing.

The first World Games went ahead without korfball. In fact, it was not until 1982 the International Korfball Federation (IKF) applied for IWGA membership. One might well ask why the IKF did not take steps earlier to become an IWGA member so korfball could have been included in the programme of World Games I. To find the answer to this, we will have to look at the history of international korfball and its growth across the continents.

2. International KORFBALL expansion: breakthrough after 70 years

Inspired by a game he had seen during a summer course in Sweden, Dutch teacher Nico Broekhuysen set about developing korfball as an outdoor sport for mixed groups of boys and girls in Amsterdam as far back as 1902. This led to the establishment in 1903 of a Netherlands Korfball Association which later took korfball to all corners of The Netherlands and beyond to the then Dutch colonial territories of Indonesia, Surinam and the Dutch Antilles. The Belgian Korfball Association was set up in 1921 and the sport was demonstrated at the Olympic Games of 1920 in Antwerp and 1928 in Amsterdam. An International Korfball Bureau came into existence in 1924, which in 1933 became the International Korfball Federation. The reason why international korfball expansion could only be actively tackled after 1945, lies in the lack of financial sources available before that time. Even then it was only possible to approach the problem sporadically – activities could only be undertaken by first of all collecting voluntary contributions from korfball clubs and players in The Netherlands and Belgium. Korfball centres were formed in several countries, but because there was no guaranteed annual income of any significance, it was not possible to ensure that the necessary attention was paid to maintaining regular contact with them. Of all these groups, only the British Korfball Association (BKA), established in 1946, was still operating in 1960.

It was not until the 1960s and 1970s that the Netherlands and Belgian associations were able to channel ever-increasing sums towards international promotion and to broaden their activities in this area. Despite enormous efforts, however, the only lasting achievement was in the Federal Republic of Germany where the Deutscher Turnerbund (DTB) affiliated in 1964. The long-awaited breakthrough finally came in the early 1970s: in 1971 the Surinam Korfball Association, set up as early as 1935, became an affiliated member, followed in 1973 by Papua New Guinea, where in 1965 English teacher and korfball player Roy Kirkby saw his work rewarded by the establishment of a korfball association there. Spain also joined the Federation in 1973, thanks to introductory ground-work carried out by Kees Terol from The Netherlands. Activities initiated by the Belgian Association brought Luxemburg into the flock in 1976. And the work went on. At the request of the American PE professor, Niek Moolenijzer, Dutch korfball teams made demonstration tours throughout the USA and out of this, the United States Korfball Federation was born, followed by IKF membership in 1978. This was also the year of Australia's entry into the federation, made possible once again by Roy Kirkby's activities.

This upward trend had the added effect of stimulating 'older' korfball countries to look anew at ways of stimulating and developing the sport. There was more money available, the number of active volunteers rose sharply and korfball clubs increasingly sought contact with other clubs beyond their national borders. A Development and Promotion Committee (DPC) was formed in 1979, comprising working committees to attend to the specific interests of the separate continents and groups of countries. Coaches and demonstration teams made visits to many countries. The first issue of an IKF newsletter appeared in 1980 and has been published quarterly under the name of 'Korfball International' ever since. The first-ever Summer Course for Coaches was organized in The Netherlands toward the end of the 1970s. More summer courses for both coaches and referees followed, and were held at the National Sports Centre Papendal (NED), providing a meeting place for korfball enthusiasts from all over the world, year after year. A high point in this whole process of development was Adri Zwaanswijk's ("Swan") six month world tour in 1979/1980, during which as head of the training department, he gave workshops in numerous countries and opened up and strengthened new avenues of contact with people interested in the sport wherever he went.

All these activities resulted in new countries affiliating to the federation: India in 1980, Aruba and France in 1982, and Indonesia in 1984. The IKF also set up official korfball committees in several other countries.

3. International match calendar: after 75 years the first IKF World Korfball Championship

Right from the beginning, friendly matches have been played between national teams and between clubs of the affiliated countries. The IKF began organizing matches in the early 1960s.

The first IKF tournament between the national senior teams of The Netherlands, Belgium and Great Britain was held in 1963. It became an annual event until in 1974 the Federal Republic of Germany also took part. The tournament was then transformed into an IKF European Korfball Championship for national youth teams. This tournament is still held as an indoor event once every four years. (See: The History of the IKF and the IKF World U23 and IKF U21 European Korfball Championships.)

The first European Cup tournament for club teams was held in 1967, bringing the two top teams from The Netherlands, Belgium and Great Britain together for the first time. This tournament has since become an annual event despite many changes in its set-up, and is now staged as an indoor tournament for the national champions of the affiliated European countries. (See: The History of the IKF Europa Cup Tournament for Club Teams).

The IKF's steady growth encouraged her in 1978, together with the Royal Dutch Korfball Association (KNKV), to organize the first IKF World Korfball Championship in honour of the KNKV's 75th anniversary. Eight countries entered the contest and produced the following result:

1. The Netherlands
2. Belgium
3. Federal Republic of Germany
4. Great Britain
5. United States of America
6. Spain
7. Papua New Guinea
8. Luxemburg

(For further details see the booklet: The history of the IKF and the IKF World Korfball Championship)

4. Inclusion of KORFBALL in the World Games; 1982

By 1982 international korfball expansion had progressed so satisfactorily, that the IKF felt she could satisfy the requirements of SportAccord membership. The necessary application was submitted and in October 1982 the IKF became an official member of SportAccord and of the International World Games Association (IWGA). The IKF succeeded in having korfball included in the programme of the World Games II to be held in London in 1985. Unfortunately, the IWGA was forced for financial reasons, to limit the number of teams for team sports to six. There were, however, a number of advantages to compensate for this disappointment: the IKF acquired a top international tournament for which the IWGA carried financial responsibility, and it benefitted from the general publicity machine surrounding the World Games as a whole. It is, of course, exactly those high costs which make large-scale tournaments so difficult to organise.

5. World Games II in London (GBR) IN 1985

The World Games in London were much more satisfactory than the 1981 Games, with 2,000 contestants taking part in 23 non-Olympic sports and sports disciplines. A distinct disadvantage, however, was the distance between the match venues for the various sports, as also the long distances between the match venues and the athletes' accommodation. The IKF invited The Netherlands, Belgium, Great Britain, USA and India to represent her in the korfball tournament. The Federal Republic of Germany and France competed for sixth place and the German team won.

The tournament was held in the sports hall of the Crystal Palace National Sports Centre and proved to be very exciting indeed. The Netherlands and Belgium had to fight it out for first place, with the final honours going to the Dutch with a 12–8 score. There was great interest in what the Indian players would achieve, totally new as they were to international korfball. They rose to the occasion well and although they lost all their matches, they did make a very promising impression indeed. The battle for third place was extremely tense and the USA achieved a surprise 10–5 win against Great Britain. The tide turned the following day, however, when the USA players were forced to succumb 10–7 to the might of the German team. These results strengthened the expectation that the German team would beat Great Britain and take third place again. But no, all forecasts were wrong. In a truly excellent match, Great Britain's star shone brightly and she thoroughly deserved her 11–6 win against the Federal Republic of Germany. But the battle was not over yet – the results showed three teams on equal points and a penalty shoot-out finally gave the USA third place, with Great Britain and the Federal Republic of Germany sharing fourth and fifth places.

The IKF decided, following the success of this first World Games korfball tournament, to continue its participation in future World Games. In order to spread the number of top events evenly, it was felt desirable to hold the IKF World Korfball Championship every four years, just as the World Games, but with a two year period between each event, i.e. IKF World Korfball Championship in 1987, World Games in 1989, IKF World Korfball Championship in 1991, World Games in 1993 etc.

The results of the IKF World Korfball Championship matches could then be used in helping to determine which countries would compete in the subsequent World Games.

6. Continued IKF expansion and World Games III in Karlsruhe (GER) in 1989

IKF growth continued. In 1985, Chinese Taipei was admitted to membership, and by sending coaches and teams to Europe and organizing large-scale activities on their home ground, they were soon committed to reaching as high a level of play in as short a time as possible. The Caribbean islands of Curaçao and Bonaire, where korfball had been played for a long time, became IKF members in 1986 and 1987 respectively. Portugal was admitted in 1987 and the number of international contacts between clubs in the various countries continued its upward trend.

The following two years were especially favourable for the IKF. Korfball had developed in New Zealand to such an extent that IKF affiliation was possible in 1988. Chinese Taipei's noble pioneering efforts in her region led to Hong Kong's entry into the federation in 1988, followed by Singapore in 1989. Membership was also granted to Poland and Denmark in 1988 and to Czechoslovakia in 1989, to strengthen the ranks in Europe.

In the meantime, IKF student korfball made forceful strides in its bid to reach more universities and more korfball-playing students. The campaign began in 1974 in The Netherlands, with the Federal Republic of Germany and Belgium following in its footsteps, plus a very strong organization in Great Britain, followed in due course by several other countries. A number of international student tournaments were held annually, whereupon the IKF formed a European Student Korfball Committee, in addition to setting up the necessary structures for European University Championships. The first of these tournaments was held in Nottingham (GBR) in 1988, the second in The Hague (NED) in 1989 with 24 teams from 8 countries, including Finland. Thereafter the tournament has been held every year.

World Games III saw the following countries competing: Federal Republic of Germany (host country), The Netherlands and Belgium (1st and 2nd in IKF World Korfball Championship 1987), the USA (highest ranking American-zone team at the IKF World Korfball Championship in 1987), Chinese Taipei (highest ranking Asian/Oceanian-zone team at the IKF World Korfball Championship), and finally Great Britain (not yet placed highest ranking European-zone team at the IKF World Korfball Championship). These teams came together in the Federal Republic of Germany where for ten days the whole town of Karlsruhe became totally involved in the World Games.

Something like 200,000 visitors were treated to the spectacle of more than 4,000 athletes from 60 countries participating in 46 non-Olympic sports disciplines, of which 19 were included in the official programme, 2 were demonstration and 25 exhibition sports.

The korfball tournament matches were all played to a "full house" of 1,200 spectators in the Schwarzwaldhalle in Karlsruhe, where 80 young korfball enthusiasts from 5 countries taking part in an international korfball camp, provided extra atmosphere with banners and cheering.

Doping controls were introduced for the first time and the tournament went off well. The Netherlands and Belgium produced the strongest teams with the Dutch taking the decisive match with a 11–9 score. This time, it was the Federal Republic of Germany players who got the bronze medals, having first of all beaten USA 11–10, followed by a very spectacular 9–8 win against Great Britain, and finally another one goal victory over the Chinese Taipei team which in turn conquered the USA (13–12) and Great Britain (9–8) to take fourth place. Great Britain and the USA drew their game, but lost their other matches to share 5th and 6th positions.

7. The IKF between World Games III and IV

The IKF continued to show concrete signs of its expansion in the wake of World Games III, when in 1990 Japan and Armenia made their official entry into the international korfball community. Another milestone along the way was the first IKF Asia/Oceania Korfball Championship held in Jakarta (INA) from 28 February – 2 March 1990. Chinese Taipei sent a strong team and became the championship's first winners, after beating Australia 11–7 into second place, followed by Hong Kong in third and Indonesia in fourth place. In the meantime the number of contacts at match level between the different continents continued to grow. European teams took part in the annual Open American Korfball Championship where Canada also made its debut in 1991. European club teams and national selections crossed half the world to the Asian countries and Australia in the interest of korfball, whilst teams from India, Chinese Taipei and Australia flew in the other direction for matches in Western Europe.

The second IKF Asia/Oceania Korfball Championships were held in New Delhi (India) in 1992; Chinese Taipei prolonged the title with Australia in second place.

This tournament had a sequel in the Continental Champions Trophy Tournament, whereby the two matches played in New Delhi between Australia and Chinese Taipei were completed by two matches by the Netherlands against each Chinese Taipei in Taipei and Australia in Australia. In the final ranking the Netherlands came first with Chinese Taipei and Australia sharing 2nd and 3rd place.

The IKF's steady growth through the years called for a restructuring of the IKF as a whole. In addition to the already existing Finance, Disciplinary, Playing Rules, Referees and Medical Committees, new committees and subcommittees were formed for Promotion, Development and Education. A Support Group Means and Resources was put at the disposal of all those committees. All these changes entailed that appropriate amendments to the Statutes had to be made plus the introduction of new Match Regulations and Disciplinary Regulations. During the course of a two-day IKF Congress held in Antwerp (BEL) in 1991, plans for the road ahead were set out, and it was noted with considerable satisfaction that in spite of a continuous lack of funds the IKF could apparently still call on a large group of enthusiastic volunteers to help her shoulder the burdens of continued expansion and development.

The order in the IKF World Korfball Championship in 1991 also determined which six countries would compete in World Games IV to be held in The Hague (NED) in 1993. It was announced well in advance that the teams taking the first six places in the IKF World Korfball Championship would compete in the World Games, with the proviso that the two highest ranking non-European teams would at any rate take part. Consequently the following teams qualified: Belgium, Chinese Taipei, Germany, Great Britain, The Netherlands, and the USA.

8. World Games IV in The Hague (NED) in 1993

The 4th World Games organised by the International World Games Association (IWGA) took place in The Hague (NED) from 22 July – 1 August 1993. Some 2,750 athletes representing 74 nationalities competed in 25 official disciplines of 22 IWGA member federations. Demonstrations in a large number of other disciplines were also held.

Although generally speaking there was less public interest in these games than was the case in Karlsruhe (GER), the korfbal tournament in the "Houtrusthallen" drew once again large numbers of spectators who became deeply involved in the often extremely exciting games. As in Karlsruhe the competition was played out between the national selections of Belgium, Germany, The Netherlands, Chinese Taipei, Great Britain and the United States of America.

As more often in the past Belgium and The Netherlands fielded the strongest sides. Both teams won their first four matches so that the game between the old rivals, scheduled as the last match on the tournament programme, had to decide the issue. The Dutch took a 3–0 lead and were leading 12–8 at half-time. Belgium then fought back but the Dutch managed to stay in front. Belgium came very close, 15–13 and then 15–14 but so it remained, making The Netherlands tournament winners once again.

Disappointing was the result of the British team. Although the scores were not bad at all the team did not win a single match. It lost narrowly (12–13) to Germany and drew with Chinese Taipei after having been down 6–12. In extra time the Chinese won by 21–18. The match against the USA also ended in a draw but after extra time victory went again to the opposing side (13–14).

The German players met their equals in their match against the USA and lost 9–10. In their final game against Chinese Taipei the Germans were leading 8–5 at half-time. In the second half Chinese Taipei managed to equalise but the Germans regained the lead and finally won by 14–13. As the Chinese Taipei had beaten the USA 15–9 on the first day of the tournament three teams finished in third place on 4 points, viz. Germany, Chinese Taipei and the USA. The tournament rules stipulate that in such a case the results before extra time shall decide. Germany thus took the bronze medals (as they also did four years earlier), while Chinese Taipei finished fourth, the USA fifth and Great Britain sixth.

The World Games also set the scene for a large number of other international korfbal activities. As usual the participating teams had come to Belgium and Holland several weeks earlier to prepare themselves for the games. On this occasion teams from Australia, Portugal, Armenia, the Czech Republic and Poland had also arrived and a large number of friendly international matches and tournaments could thus be arranged.

Some of the teams made their first acquaintance with beach korfbal on 24 July 1993 when a tournament was organised on Scheveningen beach. During this same period a number of other important IKF events took place. On the occasion of its 90th anniversary the Dutch association offered the international korfbal community a very instructive symposium on the "Organisation and Management of Korfbal Associations". The IKF held a stylish reception to mark its 60th anniversary and the General Assembly welcomed South Africa as its 30th member association.

During this meeting IKF President Bob de Die also announced the gratifying news that the Executive Board of the International Olympic Committee had agreed to recommend the IKF for official recognition.

9. The IKF between World Games IV and V; IKF WKC in INDIA

The first important event for the IKF after the World Games was the granting of official recognition to the IKF by the 101st Session of the IOC in Monte Carlo from 21–24 September 1993. The IKF had now finally achieved the goal it had been striving for since the early eighties. It was well aware, however, that a larger membership and a steady expansion of the match calendar would remain necessary.

So far as membership is concerned Slovakia was affiliated in 1994 and Cyprus in 1995.

Following the division of Czechoslovakia into two independent states IKF membership fell to the new Czech Republic. By 1993 korfball had developed so well in Slovakia that it was possible for the country to establish its own korfball association which was then successfully able to seek IKF affiliation. The membership of Cyprus was the result of contacts in the student korfball world.

The constant growth in the number of affiliated European countries led the IKF to form an European Championships Committee.

As far as the match calendar is concerned expansion was achieved by the organisation of the first U23 World Korfball Championship in Taipei from 4–7 April 1994. Eight under-23 teams participated in this event, including one from South Africa, its first time ever in an official IKF tournament. In view of its limited experience it was not surprising that this team had to be satisfied with the last position behind Great Britain (7), Hungary (6), Czech Republic (5), Australia (4), Chinese Taipei (3), Belgium (2) and U23 world champions the Netherlands.

The 3rd Asia/Oceania Korfball Championships were held in Adelaide (AUS) from 10–14 October 1994. Regretfully India had to cancel its participation at the last moment because of the outbreak of a serious epidemic in their country. Fortunately the South African national team happened to be touring in Australia and they were prepared to take India's place in the tournament, resulting in two separate final rankings: one with and one without South Africa. For the third time running the tournament was won by the team of Chinese Taipei with the host team in second place.

And so we came to 1995, the year of the 5th IKF World Korfball Championship in New Delhi, India, the first of its kind to be held outside Europe. Twelve countries were admitted to the final phase of the World Korfball Championship.

Final ranking IKF World Korfball Championship 1995:

- | | |
|--------------------|-------------------|
| 1. The Netherlands | 7. Czech Republic |
| 2. Belgium | 8. Great Britain |
| 3. Portugal | 9. Arménka |
| 4. Australia | 10. Slovakia |
| 5. Chinese Taipei | 11. South Africa |
| 6. Germany | 12. India |

The Netherlands confirmed their superiority by winning the 2nd Continental Champions Trophy Tournament which was held in Tulsa (USA) nine months later. Chinese Taipei finished second ahead of the USA and South Africa.

10. World Games V in Lahti (FIN) in 1997

The fifth edition of the World Games was held from 7–17 August 1997 in the friendly city of Lahti in Finland. Beautiful weather and short distances between the competition venues made this a memorable event for the 2,500 odd athletes and officials from 78 different countries. The first six teams of the 5th World Korfball Championship had been admitted to the korfball tournament which was held in the Urheilutalo hall in the heart of Lahti. This means that Great Britain and the USA who had been present at all three previous World Games tournaments had lost their places to Portugal and Australia. The final ranking in the tournament was to a large extent decided on the first day when Belgium beat Chinese Taipei and Australia won the match between the two newcomers. Although the standard of play was higher than ever before the matches brought less excitement than in previous World Games. None of the other teams ever looked like threatening the supremacy of The Netherlands and the way the world champions retained their World Games title in the deciding match against arch-rivals Belgium was first class. Chinese Taipei very deservedly went home with the bronze medals. Germany came fourth, Australia fifth and Portugal sixth.

11. The IKF between World Games V and VI; 6TH IKF World Korfball Championship in AUSTRALIA

Since the IKF membership had repeatedly decided to put the emphasis on quality rather than on quantity the growth in terms of affiliated countries remained limited: Russia and Turkey joined in 1997 and Macau in 2000, thus bringing the number of member countries to 35. However, with the foundation of the Asian Oceanian Korfball Federation in April 1999 a further step was set on the road toward a restructuring of the IKF organisation, a process which should be finalized by the year 2003 when the centenary of the korfball sport would be celebrated.

The tournament calendar was further expanded by the creation of an IKF European Korfball Championship for national teams, the first edition of which was held in Estoril (POR) in April 1998 with The Netherlands as winners with Belgium and Portugal in places two and three.

In November of the same year the 2nd IKF U23 World Korfball Championship was held in various towns in The Netherlands. The final ranking of the first three teams was the same as four years earlier in Taipei:

1. Netherlands; 2. Belgium; 3. Chinese Taipei.

The 6th IKF World Korfball Championship were held in yet another continent: Australia. From 10–17 July 1999 the best korfballers in the world were assembled in the Clipsal Powerhouse in Adelaide. Based on the results in the 1995 IKF World Korfball Championship and the 1997 World Games the Exco had admitted twelve teams to this championship, one of which (the Czech Republic) was forced to withdraw for financial reasons and replaced by Catalonia.

The bronze medals were won by a more experienced British side which beat their much younger German rivals by a two goal margin. The way the Dutch triumphed over Belgium in the final (23–11!) made the IKF President write in the IKF magazine that "such proficiency in korfball has never before been shown by any team anywhere". The IOC President's trophy for the most spectacular team went to newcomers Poland.

| 3. Great Britain | 9. Poland |
| 4. Germany | 10. South Africa |
| 5. Portugal | 11. India |
| 6. Chinese Taipei | 12. Japan |

Following the success of an IKF Asian–African Korfball Championship in Durban in 1998 the South African Korfball Federation was awarded the organisation of the 3rd IKF U23 World Korfball Championship which was held on the premises of the University of Pretoria in July 2001. The Netherlands and Belgium retained their first and second place in the final ranking but this time the team of the Czech Republic managed to beat their Chinese Taipei rivals to win their first trophy in a major world event.

During the General Assembly the IKF welcomed the Korfball Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina as its 36th member.

12. World Games VI in Akita (JPN) in 2001

The first six teams of the 6th IKF World Korfball Championship were invited to take part in the korfball tournament of the 6th World Games in the town of Rokugo in the Akita prefecture of Japan in August 2001, the first World Games on Asian soil. However, since Germany declined the invitation for financial reasons, its place was given to Australia. Contrary to previous World Games the teams did not play a round robin, but were divided into two groups. Thus every day two of the teams had a night off and on that day one of them played a friendly game against the national team of Japan, thus giving much needed international experience to the host country and something extra for the Japanese spectators. Players and officials will remember the Akita games for the excellent organisation and the very friendly and helpful attitude of the citizens of Rokugo, for the initiation into Japanese culture, for the extremely hot weather and for the typhoon that caused the removal of the airco on the final day of the tournament so that balls had to be changed and dried every few minutes!

A 16–9 pool win by Belgium against Chinese Taipei made it clear that the final would once again be contested by the Netherlands and Belgium. In the first 30 minutes of that final the Dutch played such superior korfball that already at half-time the Belgians faced an unbridgeable 15–4 gap. In the second half the Dutch scoring machine slowed down considerably so that the final whistle gave the world champions a 22–10 victory and their fifth set of World Games gold medals. The other two matches on the final day were very close, Great Britain beating Australia 13–12 and Chinese Taipei winning 17–16 against Portugal to give them again third place in the final ranking.

13. The IKF between World Games VI and VII; IKF Centennial World Korfball Championship in the Netherlands

Highlight of the following four year period was, of course, the centenary of korfball in 2003, celebrated with a congress (“The spirit of korfball”), various other events and the 7th IKF World Korfball Championship (the Centennial Championship) in the cradle of our sport: the Netherlands. After a first preliminary round in the province of Zeeland the remaining 16 teams assembled in Rotterdam for an exciting finish to the celebrations, whereby the eight best teams played in Group A for the world title and the remaining eight countries in Group B for the places 9–16. The big question was, of course, whether the supremacy of the low countries would be seriously challenged. Hadn’t the Belgians lost to the Czech Republic the year before during the 2nd IKF European Korfball Championship and didn’t Australia challenge Chinese Taipei for the Asia–Oceania crown, a title the Aussies would for the first time win during the 6th IKF Asia Oceania Korfball Championship in Christchurch (NZL) in 2004. As it turned out, however, the Dutch and the Belgians won all their matches quite comfortably and in the final the Netherlands once again showed their superiority by beating their rivals by 22 goals to 9.

The 13th IKF U21 European Korfball Championship in October 2002 and the 2nd IKF U23 Asia Oceania Korfball Championship in January 2003 provided the participants in the 4th IKF U23 World Korfball Championship in Duisburg (GER) in November 2004, which also served as a test event for the 7th World Games which would be held in the same town and the same hall the following year. Further details on these events may be found in the booklet on “The history of the IKF and the IKF U23 World and IKF U21 European Korfball Championships”.

With the affiliation of Sweden, Greece, Italy, Romania and Brazil the membership of the IKF grew to 41 countries.

14. World Games VII in Duisburg (GER) in 2005

The seventh World Games, superbly organised in Duisburg, Germany, have been hailed as the most successful yet with over 600,000 people attending over the ten days of sport and concurrent cultural events. Crowds at the different venues soared way beyond expectations and the korfball tournament was no exception. In addition to the host country the first five teams of the IKF Centennial World Korfball Championship were invited to take part in the competition which was held over five days in the well equipped Sporthalle Krefelder Strasse. Since Germany was allowed to participate the IKF had decided to go back to the traditional round robin so that all the teams would meet each other.

The first day left the numerous spectators wondering whether the match between the Netherlands and Belgium, programmed as the very last in the competition, would again decide the World Games title. Reason: the unexpected difficulties Belgium faced in their opening match against Great Britain in which it only scraped home by 14 goals to 12. This was the first of many tight and tense matches during the Games. Chinese Taipei lost twice by the odd goal (against Belgium and Germany) and won against the Czech Republic by a golden goal. Beside their opening game the Belgians had a further two close matches against Chinese Taipei (15–14) and against the Czech Republic after a golden goal (12–11). However, the extra time earned the Czechs just that extra point that was enough to secure them third place and bronze medals. The Netherlands cruised fairly comfortably through the tournament so the final match between the Dutch and their eternal rivals Belgium would once again decide the title.

Not an inch was given in the first half which ended with the Netherlands leading 6–3 and with passions boiling on a hot Duisburg afternoon. However, after the break the Dutch gradually started to dominate and with 17 minutes left the game was effectively over. While the Belgian task was too great by this stage, they refused to capitulate entirely, but the Netherlands were preparing to celebrate by ending the tournament in style. The gap was widened to 10 goals with six minutes left and there was still time for two more as the match ended 18–6. Gold again for the world champions from the Netherlands.

15. The IKF in the period 2005 - 2009

The IKF grew substantially in this four year period. At high pace new countries were affiliated to the IKF; Serbia, Zimbabwe, Bulgaria, China, Korea, Georgia, Malawi, Scotland, Wales. Wales was in 2006 member number 50! In 2007 and 2008 the growth continued; Ireland, Dominican Republic, Malaysia, Argentina, Pakistan, Botswana and Croatia. At the end of 2008 the IKF had 57 members.

This growth was very instrumental in the reconfirmation of the IKF as IOC recognised federation. The IKF is recognised by the IOC since 1993. The extension was granted in 2007 for another 4-year term.

The IKF World Korfball Championship 2007 were played in Brno, Czech Republic. Sixteen countries participated in this well organised event. The results can be found in the booklet The History of the IKF and the IKF World Korfball Championship.

In 2008 the 5th IKF U23 World Korfball Championship in Kaohsiung (TPE), which also served as a test event for the 8th World Games, took place in the same venue as the 2009 World Games. The results can be found in the booklet The History of the IKF and the IKF U23 World and IKF U21 European Korfball Championships.

16. World Games VIII in Kaohsiung (TPE) in 2009

The eighth World Games, superbly organised in Kaohsiung, Chinese Taipei, were most successful. Many hundred thousands of people attending over the ten days of sport and concurrent cultural events. The different venues were very well prepared and the korfball tournament was no exception. In addition to the host country the seven highest ranked teams of the IKF World Korfball Championship 2007 were invited to take part in the competition which was held over five days. For the first time 8 korfball teams in the World Games. Further the korfball event did for the first time ever use the shot clock – touch the korf within 25 seconds after the start of the attack - in an IKF event. It was a great success with a faster game and generally more goals being the result. Players no longer have the opportunity to slow down the game.

The IKF had decided to go again to 2 pools of 4 teams each. In the first round the teams played 3 matches. Followed by semi finals and finals on the last event day.

The first match with shotclock, i.e. the first World Games match was Czech Republic versus Australia. In the first half the Czech Republic took their lead up to 9-4. But Australia fought back and scored 5 times with the Czech Republic scoring only once. Half time 10-9.

After the break the Czech Republic dominated the game bringing the score up to 15-10. Although Australia continued to play quite well they could not threaten the Czechs anymore. Final score 21-16. The shotclock was a success.

The Netherlands retained the World Games korfball title in Kaohsiung (TPE) after a heavily-fought victory in the final against Belgium (25-20). This was the highest World Games score ever in a championship final so far.

In a similar contest, Chinese Taipei delivered a bronze medal to a loud and cheerful crowd after beating Russia. Remarkable was the extreme attention of the media for this important game for Chinese Taipei. More than 10 cameras around the sports hall. Chinese Taipei opened the game with 2 long shots. Russia scored three times in a row and took the lead, keeping it until the 16'. Chinese Taipei scored the equalising goal (8-8) and shortly after took a 2 goal lead. Russia kept fighting but Chinese Taipei managed to increase the advantage. Fatigue began to weigh heavily for the Russian team and in the last 15' of second half Chinese Taipei kept on scoring easily to win the match (25-18).

The Czech Republic achieved 5th place after a Golden Goal win (19-18) over Portugal. In most of the game Portugal was leading with 1 or 2 goals. At half time the score was 8-10. Portugal stayed in 2 goals front till 55'. In the last 5 minutes the Czech Republic equalised at 18-18. Golden Goal had to decide this match. The second for the Czechs in this event and the second win for the Czech team.

The match for 7th and 8th place between England and Australia showed greater scoring abilities in the English team. They were more effective in developing opportunities to goals. At half time the score was 11-8. The end result was 31-18 for England.

Event topscorers were

Male: Jos Roseboom (NED) 33 goals

Female: Ines Bioscas (POR) 26 goals

17. World Games IX in Cali, Colombia in 2013

The opening ceremony of the 9th World Games in Cali, Colombia took place in front of 35,000 spectators in the sold-out stadium on the evening of 25 July, another 40,000 watching the event on a large screen outside the stadium, and hundreds of thousands of Caleños celebrating the opening of the event in the streets. It's the 1st time this multi-sport event was held on the South American continent.

4,500 athletes and officials coming from 101 countries from all over the world participated in competitions in 31 sports in the second largest event in the Olympic Movement. In his opening address, Colombian Vice-President Garzon mentioned that Latin America needs to regain its position on the international sporting stage, having lost a lot over the past several decades.

For korfball the event has been a challenge due to the fact that we did not yet have a local federation of any particular strength. Yet the Games have brought the energy to get this going, and make Colombia our next strong foothold in Latin America.

Day 1

Belgium – Russia 30-15 (14-9)

The opening game brought no surprise. Slow starting from both teams resulted in 14-9 at half time. Accurate shooting from the Belgians took away all hope for the Russians to bother their opponents.

Chinese Taipei – Germany 22-15 (10-8)

The absolutely magnificent new sport hall was sold out. Taipei made a tremendous start opening a six goal lead sentencing Germany to a difficult struggle to catch up.

With the Germans missing too many scoring chances Taipei controlled the game till the end.

The Netherlands – Portugal 38-18 (22-10)

Much animation when the president of Colombia is escorted to watch the beginning of this match. The crowd enjoys some beautiful actions. This is necessary the score difference is too important

Great Britain – Czech Republic 17-18 (11-6)

This proved to be the most exciting game of the day and the Czechs could not believe how they managed to win. Britain was the better team for most of the match and still led by five goals with 14 minutes left. Suddenly their scoring dried up and the Czechs scored three times in the last minute to snatch an incredible victory.

Day 2

Great Britain – The Netherlands 19-39 (9-21)

The English coach had a tough time to get his team in shape for the games against the World Champion after yesterday. On the other hand a match without any expectations is an opportunity to start aiming for a better performance.

The Dutch team did its best to entertain the public with spectacular moves and pretty well succeeded in catching the attention.

Chinese Taipei – Belgium 21-26 (10-11)

The game that was announced as the clash of the day showed everything spectators can wish to experience in the first half. Tight defending, struggle for the rebounds from both sides and a magnificent buzzer shot to end after the first 25 minutes.

When the Belgians secured their defence Taipei had trouble finding the right solution. Belgian attackers had the best momentum creating a goal difference that was unlikely to be threatened.

Portugal – Czech Republic 21-18 (12-10)

A quick start from Portugal and immediate answers from the Czechs! Are we in for a high score? However, the tempo dropped and both teams suffered from bad shooting.

There were again a lot of spectators on day 2 to watch a nice game. The teams stayed close together till just before the end when Portugal managed to create a safe gap.

Russia – Germany 15-19 (5-14)

A nervous game resulting in a score that went up slowly because both teams were aware that the loser is definitely out of the search for glory! A comfortable lead however allowed Germany to control the game after the break.

As the Russians still believed in a miracle and the Germans forgot to build good attacks and acted too nervously, everything remained possible. At the end it seemed that the Russians woke up too late!

Day 3

Chinese Taipei – Russia 24-20 (15-9)

After the deception of the day before Chinese Taipei started without much conviction allowing Russia to take the lead. But with clear instructions from the coach the team soon set things right to obtain a comfortable position at the break. It was a similar game after the break with Taipei assuring the goal difference and Russian eagerly trying to close the gap. At the end everybody was happy with the score of a rather predictable result.

The Netherlands – Czech Republic 42-19 (15-10)

Sometimes when teams play The Netherlands they show too much respect but the Czechs started the game trying to keep the gap as close as possible and they pretty well succeeded in this mission. That was, of course, until the Dutch machine became fully operational.

In the second half, with a big crowd to entertain, the Dutch team showed that korfbal players are highly skilled athletes. In a thrilling atmosphere the lack of struggle for victory was highly compensated by the technical moves of the competitors. Excellent entertainment and a record aggregate score (61 goals) in a World Games korfbal match surpassing the 58 scored in yesterday's Dutch match.

Great Britain – Portugal 17–20 (8-8)

Much emotion in this game. Both teams knew they had to win to preserve their chances for the semis. Portugal put all its efforts in quick but nervous physical play. It was countered by slower actions as a result of the more tactical plan of Great Britain.

Misunderstandings, bad passing, bad shots and exceeding the shot clock time were typical occurrences for the start of the second half. Portugal then managed to create a small lead for which there was no answer in a first stage. England somewhat unlucky missed a few good chances that could have kept them hope. Portugal missed a penalty that could have been decisive and this gave confidence to the opponents. An atypical situation, a shot without any chance on a rebound, went in for the Portugal to win this exciting match.

Belgium – Germany 33-7 (20-4)

Belgium did not have a hard time to set things in the right direction from the start. The second half continued in a similar vein. This was an attractive match for Belgian supporters and addicts of statistics.

Day 4; Finals day

The Netherlands retained their World Games crown but did not find it as easy as they may have hoped. The Belgians would not surrender without a sportive fight and it was only in the closing stages of the first half that the Dutch really put their mark on the match, finally leading at half time 13 -7.

This Belgian side showed in the second half why it is considered to be one of the better sides of recent years as they tried to fight back. In fact they drew the second half twelve goals each finally losing 25 – 19.

Shortly before the end two Dutch players – Barry Schep and Rick Voorneveld – were honoured as they were substituted as both were retiring from international korfbal after long and distinguished careers.

The bronze medal game between Portugal and Chinese Taipei proved to be a very tense affair in the end. At first it did not look that way as the Chinese opened up a six goal lead after 15 minutes but Portugal hit back and within six minutes of the second half had clawed their way back to level. Taipei went ahead again by two but the Portuguese halved this lead before we entered the most tense stage of the match, especially for the Chinese Taipei coach who was forced to watch the match from the tribune after her yellow card the day before). Both teams missed chances and failed to score for over five minutes. Eventually the Chinese scored the important goal that meant the teams changed ends and from then on they were not threatened, finishing up winning the bronze medal with an 18-14 victory (h/t 10-7).

The match for 5th place was played between Great Britain and Russia. In the first half the Russians three times took the lead before Great Britain opened a four goal gap, narrowed to two by half time (9-7). Within five minutes of the second half the scores were level but the British team carried on playing their methodical korfbal, gradually opening up and, unlike in their opening game against the Czechs, keeping it to eventually take 5th place with a 19-14 score line.

The game for 7th place was a surprising high scoring game and also very exciting. After the Czechs opening a two goal lead Germany hit back and opened up leads of their own, only for the Czechs to get back to level.

Germany just edged ahead by half time (13-12). In the second half the Germans tried to open a decisive gap but by the 42nd minute the Czechs not only got level but went ahead themselves. The game became level again and with first one team and then the other leading at times we got to the last two minutes with the scores level. The final 60 seconds the Czechs scored the vital goal and when a German player made a very heavy foul, giving away a penalty, the victory for the Czech Republic was assured despite one more goal from Germany (26-27 in favour of the Czech Republic).

18. World Games X in Wroclaw, Poland in 2017

The World Games X will take place from 20 – 30 July 2017.

The korfball event will be played from 21 – 25 July in the WKK Sport Center in Wroclaw.

The World Games is the most important korfball event in the IKF's 2017 calendar.

The result of the pooldraw is:

| | POOL A | POOL B |
|----|-----------------|----------------|
| 1. | The Netherlands | Chinese Taipei |
| 2. | Belgium | Great Britain |
| 3. | China | Germany |
| 4. | Australia | Poland |

The teams in all four lines were drawn with each set of two teams based on the IKF Ranking from 1 January 2017.

China and Poland will be new competitors in the World Games korfball event.
