

World Korfball Update - 2022 - edition IX

The last quarter of this year is well underway and we see a lot of international tournaments, as well as kickoffs of national competitions. This edition of the World Korfball Update gives you all the ins and outs of the upcoming events, with special attention for TuS Schildgen E.v., a German team that will participate in the IKF Korfball Champions League Round 2 after claiming first place in Round 1.

IKF All-Africa Korfball Championship North-West

Competitions

The first World Korfball Championship Qualification event of this year was the IKF All-Africa Korfball Championship North-West, a three-day tournament in Abidjan. An IKF Referee clinic took place before the start of the tournament, to prepare the local referees for their first performances as duo-referees at an official IKF event. Morocco, Ivory Coast and Ghana competed during the tournament to claim the trophy and a spot in the IKF WKC next year. Morocco ended on the top of the charge, with Ivory Coast as runner-up and Ghana as third.

More spots for the IKF WKC 2023 were on the line this month! The road to Chinese Taipei started for eight

European national teams in the Czech Republic. The tournament had a strong field of competition, including England, and the two finalists of the last edition of the IKF EKC-B (Poland and Slovakia). The teams played each other in a round-robin set-up. England completed the tournament undefeated and claimed the trophy. Poland came in second, with Slovakia as the bronze medal winner. Congratulations to England and Poland for qualifying for the IKF World Korfball Championship 2023!

Türkiye. Again, there are many teams trying to claim a spot in the IKF WKC next year: Hungary, Catalonia, Wales, Scotland, Switzerland, Türkiye and France. The top-2 will qualify, so we expect to see intense matches to get the needed points. Make sure to check out the livestreams and worlkorfball.sport! Worldkorfball.sport for livestreams and statistics

One spot in the IKF WKC will be at stake during the IKF AAKC South, which will be played from 11-13
